The vision of the Avner Pancreatic Cancer Foundation is to break through 40 years of no progress by doubling the number of people who survive pancreatic cancer by 2020. The Foundation is working toward this vision by raising funds through corporate and community fundraising events, increasing awareness of the disease and working with a team of national and international scientific experts to advise on research investments. The Foundation is the only charity in Australia dedicated exclusively to Pancreatic Cancer, committed to the thousands of families affected by the disease each year in Australia.

As part of the Australian Pancreatic Alliance, they work closely with Avner Pancreatic Cancer Foundation, Garvan Research Foundation, GI Cancer Institute and Pancare Foundation. They are represented by two high profile ambassadors — both of whom lost their mothers to pancreatic cancer — who help champion their cause. While most of the organization's efforts are centered around Pancreatic Cancer Awareness Month and World Pancreatic Cancer Day, they also work with sponsors and commercial concerns to promote awareness. #PurpleOurWorld plans to release another video to encourage people to talk about the disease. Pancreasnetværket i Danmark is a national network of caregivers and patients with cancer of the pancreas, bile duct or duodenum. Their goal is to provide opportunities for stakeholders to come together and work toward improving the future outcome for these patients. Established in 2015, with the help of The Danish Cancer Society, they produce and distribute informational material at Denmark's four major university hospitals that provide surgical or oncological care for patients diagnosed with cancer in the upper abdomen. On World Pancreas Cancer Day in 2015, the network hosted its second major conference at the Copenhagen University Hospital Herlev, bringing caregivers and patients together with some of the country's leading surgeons, oncologists and experts in palliative care. The network actively works with the Danish health authorities in planning for long term care of pancreatic cancer patients.

Concerned with diverse, difficult situations after surgery on the pancreas, patients had the idea to found a working group in Heidelberg. That was in 1976. Precisely at the same time, people also came together to raise awareness and to solve life-threatening problems - the idea of "self-help" was born. Since 1976, doctors and nutritionists have worked with the AdP. The organization supports the rehabilitation of patients, suffering from pancreatic disease (operation or illness of the pancreas itself). But particularly, the AdP supports patients with pancreatic cancer. With over 1,300 active members and more than 60 groups in Germany, the AdP raises significant awareness about pancreatic cancer. Every year, more than 16,500 cases of pancreatic cancer are diagnosed in Germany. The organization estimates more than 65,000 incidences of chronic pancreatic inflammation in the country as well. The AdP is a non-profit organization that has developed a well-functioning system of aid for the disease since 1979, with the support of doctors from different disciplines: nutritionists, psychologists and social experts. The organization is a member of the "Paritaetische Wohlfahrtsverband," the "Rehabilitation Association for Digestive and Metabolic Diseases," the German "Pancreas Club," the German "Diabetes Federation" and the "Gastro League Club." It is funded by the "German Cancer Aid" foundation. A scientific advisory board of experts supports the AdP board and its groups throughout Germany with important medical information about health care and policy.

My Everest Association was founded in Rivolta D'Adda (CR) in October 2015 by Monica Rozzoni, Luca and Chiara Sala, wife and sons of Luigi Sala, who was the founder of "My Everest Project." He died from pancreatic cancer at the age of 46. "My Everest Project" was an initiative aimed at people suffering from pancreatic cancer: The name comes from the passion that Luigi had for the mountains. His first goal had been to raise 8,848 euros to support pancreatic cancer research at the San Raffaele Hospital in Milan, virtually climbing 1 meter/euro of the highest mountain in the world - Mount Everest. Luigi climbed other mountains when he was sick to demonstrate that when you have cancer you can do a lot of incredible things, even climb mountains never climbed before. He demonstrated that the best way to face the illness was to be positive and trust in medicine.

Luigi knew that this cancer is still not well-known to scientific research because its symptoms are silent and it is possible to diagnose it only in advanced stages. For this reason, he decided to raise funds for clinical trials. Today, the project is focused on providing information on current clinical trials and on prevention via its website and, of course, on raising funds for research.

Suzanne Wright Foundation Initiative CodePurple

www.codepurplenow.org

Jackie Orsher, Communications Director | jackie.orsher@suzannewrightfoundation.org

Initiative CodePurple is an awareness and advocacy campaign dedicated to driving urgency and action in the fight against pancreatic cancer. With the highest mortality rate of all major cancers, pancreatic cancer is an emergency. It must be a national priority, and we demand a new approach to federal pancreatic cancer research. We propose a pancreatic cancer pilot program, with federal research assets, that leverages the tools and resources of the private sector to fast-track the development of an early detection test and curative treatments. Medical advances have saved millions of lives and new technologies have contributed to a dramatic improvement in survival rates for breast, colon and prostate cancers. In all this time, pancreatic cancer patients have been left behind. CodePurple aims to grow the influence, resources and public support for the broader pancreatic cancer community.
